Feast your eyes on NRG Style's charcuterie boards

Charcuterie (Shar-Koo-Tuh-Ree) boards have fast become one of the trendiest entertaining tools and local producer NRG Style is happy to meet the demand.

"Common charcuterie spreads include an array of cured meats, cheeses, fresh and dried fruits and more," says NRG Style sales manager Steve Botelho, "but the assortment of food is nothing without it being served on an attractive base."

At NRG Style founder and owner Neil Goodhall crafts charcuterie boards from "locally sourced walnut, hard maple and exotic Italian olive-wood." He explains these hardwoods are beautiful and, more importantly, durable.

"Every board we design and cut is thought out in order to maximize the character of the wood grain. Each one is sanded to a very fine grit and receives a generous coat of our favourite mineral oil, then polished to give it a very high-end finish."

The team at NRG Style also customize boards with epoxy to either fill natural voids in the wood or to fill a precise cut out. "We commonly use the maple leaf or an olive as one of our favourites but do any logos requested as well," Goodhall explains. Botelho adds that it's a great place for branding from a business standpoint or customization for personal use.

"Anything from initials and dates to images can be burned into the board," Goodhall claims.
